

Emily VanderMolen

Emily grew up in an Assemblies of God church in a small Midwestern town. In junior high, her parents became missionaries, promoting her to the lifelong title of Missionary Kid. In college, she earned a degree in Nonprofit Business and Social Enterprise, with a minor in Intercultural Studies from Evangel University. After graduating, she worked at Convoy of Hope for two years, serving in their International Program Department managing data and coordinating operations. Emily has also ministered to teenage girls for a few years, including being active as a youth group leader, hosting a small group, and enjoying many heart-to-heart conversations over a good cup of coffee.

Emily's heart is for girls to find fullness of life in a relationship with Jesus and she loves how Girls Ministries is the foundation for doing just that. Emily went through the Girls Ministries program when she was a young girl. This became a foundation for her seeking of God's truth above all else when the challenging preteen and teenage years came. Even though the world tries to convince girls of the lie that they are worthless and weak, Emily believes that every girl has value and a courageous voice to live a life of godly truth.

Emily currently serves as the Product and Field Support Coordinator for National Girls Ministries, with an emphasis on Teen Girls Ministries.
